

Guy Baehr, Corresponding Secretary for the New Jersey Foundation for Open Government, spent almost 30 years as a daily newspaper reporter in New Jersey, including 25 years at the Star-Ledger in Newark, where he covered a variety of beats including transportation, development and business. From 2002 to 2007 he served as associate director of the Journalism Resources Institute at Rutgers University and taught investigative reporting in the university's Department of Journalism & Media Studies. He is a graduate of Wesleyan University and the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism and was a volunteer with the Peace Corps in the Dominican Republic. He is a former president of the New Jersey Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists and also served on the Society's national board. He was a founding member of NJFOG.